So come get your tickets, limited time,

To the world where everything must rhyme

Chapter 2 by Lilly

In this world you will see that there are far worse people than me

Your brain will shrink to the size of a nail and time will go as slow as a snail.

I'm off to get my ticket, I hope i'm not late

...and more to come in the future

in the world were everything rhymes

Chapter 3 by Rainyday

So as I leave to this new world please don't cry, shut up, smile and keep your cheeks dry,

I say farewell to this world where grammar is droll,
Where sentences make sense, and only songs have soul,

to buy this ticket I sold everything I own,
Then to the bank I went to ask for a loan,

So now I only have a change of clothes to take,
unpacking there will be a piece of cake;

Ticket in hand I'm off like Dr. Seuss,
To a world where the Mayor is the Great Mother Goose,

So Goodbye and good riddance for the hundredth time,
I leave to the world where you either die by fire or you Rhyme.

Chapter 4 by Rainyday

So here am I in the world of rhyme,
Shackled and chained doing my time.

You see I came to this world that was strange and new to me,
I was questioned in customs and was treated quite brutally,

The man asked me "Are you here for business or vacation?",
I said "neither I am here to stay" and was arrested there in the station,

I have right to appeal and to be allowed to bring my own lawyer

There will be a great bonfire prepared for me, a murderer, a lawyer as well,
We are to burn there in those flames unless a great poem we can tell.

Chapter 5 by champion_Curiosity always wins

"Truth be told," whispers the lawyer,
"I don't do so well with rhyming."
The murderer replies, "Don't look at me; I'm no Tom Sawyer."
I input, "Never mind that, it's all about the timing."

..."So, here's the plan:"

"M, you choke."

"L, you land."

"And what'll you do?", the lawyer spoke.

"This." I lashed out at the guard nearest to me.

Despite the struggle and panic,

there was levity.

M whooped, "That there, was some good dynamic."

"Hands up. Don't move!"

I slowly turned, "Funk*, we're screwed!"

Chapter 6 by TheBookSnek

"No, you're not,"
said a face full of snot.

He had appeared in my darkest hour
With a face so very sour.

I'm here to set you free

But you will just have to run

Go straight home to your garden gnome.

I don't need to be told twice
we scurried out just like mice

I'm sorry if I don't give this world five stars
I would rather go to Mars.
